

Welcome to my Good/Bad photo book!

Rather than distracting from the images on the page, here is a quick analysis of my work.

Image set 1 was work I did promoting food at the restaurant I work at. The first image is shadowed poorly and doesn't show the bright features of the food like the “good” image does.

Set 2: The image on the right was a photo taken casually with a snapchat filter (ew) and the “good” photo has the subject in focus which allows you to see all the colors and focus on the subject.

Sets 3 & 4: These were taken on a film camera. The images on the right smooth out the tones (skin) and reduce the harsh exposure.

Set 5: This image was taken at sunrise, The “good” photo uses develop tools to enhance the sky and create a better contrast between the sand and sky.
